

Gregor Mainusch, Freiburg.

Studies in Social Sciences and Business Administration, Diplom Betriebswirt
ODI (Organizational Dynamics) Management Trainer

After his professional education in industrial management and as marketing assistant in Berlin and Milan; Gregor completed his first professional experiences with the studies of business administrations at the University of Hamburg with focus on strategy implementation. Following; he started to work in business- and management consulting for several years. From this time Gregor was focusing on holistic development of organizations and trainings.

During the following 15 years; Gregor was changing to work successfully for some big multinational pharmaceutical, biotech- and medtech companies in people- and organizational development with focus on international leadership- and talent development; organizational-, team- and the development of corporate cultures and setup of corporate universities.

Gregor has a strong command and wide experiences in Europewide- and international projects in HRD-, people- and organizational development. Beside his strategic work for cooperations; Gregor was always working as trainer and coach in practice.

Since 10 years Gregor operates as a freelance professional in management consulting and training focusing on leadership development, organizational transformation and New Work in English, German and Italian language. His passion is to be engaged with the question of which HRD drivers are the most effective ones to implement business strategies and how to build internal transformers.

During the last years Gregor extended his new work skill base towards digital business coaching and remote team development with multinational clients.

Gregor gives lectures in „International Leadership and Cooperation“ at the Baden-Wuerttemberg Cooperative State University. He is faculty member of the Management Center Europe / AMA organization and works as a senior associate for their international clients.

